Today is the 11th Anniversary of the Terrorist Attacks on New York and Washington that killed over 2500 people. September 11th will forever be in the minds and hearts of those that remember that September morning in 2001. We will always remember where we were and what we were doing when we heard the news. Today, in our moment of silence, please remember those who lost their lives as a result of the attack, plus those men and women who lost their lives trying to save them. May this day be forever engrained in our memory as the day our country came together to help each other and to stand as one against the evil forces who attempted, and failed to disrupt the liberties we enjoy as a free people. We now honor their memory with a moment of silence.
